

COULDN'T DO OTHERWISE.

Mr. Bartine went into the Republican caucus and voted for Henderson. Reed, however, was the caucus nominee, and when the regular vote came in the House of Representatives, all who had attended the caucus abided by the results of the caucus, and voted for Reed, as all the Republican members did, and as the Silver State ought to know was the only thing left for him to do under the circumstances.—[CARSON APPEAL.]

The APPEAL is correct in its statement of the case. Mr. Bartine was elected by the Republicans of Nevada with no authority to bolt the caucuses of his party. He was in fact expected to act with his party in the House, and as an honorable man he could not do otherwise, under the circumstances than vote for Mr. Reed after that gentleman had received the nomination in caucus. The Times Review hopes however, that such action will be taken by both parties in Nevada next year that our representatives will not be sent to Washington with their hands tied, but that they will be free to act with any body of men in Congress most favorable to the silver cause. Unless this is done we might as well send the most radical mono-metalists to represent us, for any good our silver men can accomplish when bound down by the action of inimical party organizations. The fact that our Congressman was obliged to vote on the floor of the House for perhaps the most bitter opponent of the white metal, that holds a seat in our National Legislature, ought to awaken the people of Nevada to the necessity of such action as will avert such an incongruous condition of things in the future.—Times Review.

PACIFIC COAST ITEMS.

There are forty feet of snow on some of the Central Pacific sheds.

Almond trees are in full bloom in Capay Valley, Yolo county.

School teachers in Sacramento county, who failed to attend the County Institute, are to be suspended for one month.

A genius has succeeded in inventing a machine for wrapping oranges that does the work of three men. He says that it can wrap 2,500 oranges in one hour.

Saturday a railroad collision occurred near Arlington, Or., but the fatal circumstances connected therewith, if any actually occurred, were suppressed by the railroad people. It is stated that several persons were killed.

Judge Deady, at Portland, holds that the Union Pacific Company has the right to receive freight at any point on its system destined to any point on the Northern Pacific line, and that the latter is bound to receive it and charge its rates for the delivery of the same.

During the recent floods at Anaheim every hummock was swarming with hares and rabbits that were driven from the plains. They were slaughtered by thousands by boys and men, who used sticks, and when tired of the sport they would run the poor beasts off their dry places into the raging waters.

The Tacoma murder mystery is still unravelled. The body of the unknown man has been exposed for five days and is still unrecognized.

Andrew Christu, aged twenty-five years, rushed in front of the local express at Portland Or., yesterday, with suicidal intent, and was killed.

Daniel E. Bandmann has begun suit for $5,000 against the Northern Pacific, because it failed to deliver his baggage at Spokane Falls in time to fill his engagement.

The mining outlook on the Comstock, says the Enterprise, is not as poor as it is represented. Things looked much worse in 1869, and also in 1879, than in 1889. Intelligent work was inaugurated in 1870, and it will again be resumed in 1890. The lode boomed in 1871, and also in 1881, and will again in 1891.
